

mination against them for many years. Col. Kosterlitzky of the rurales was put on the job to kill them off. He was some fighter himself and did well, but there are Yaquis left.

The Yaquis are intelligent and, strange to say, understand machinery—a remarkable trait in an Indian. Many of them were employed in the American mines in Mexico until the present war. The revolt gives the Yaquis another chance to establish themselves upon their ancient lands. Villa has used them in numbers, but if Villa finally succeeds and then fails to give them their lands they will fight him as cheerfully as they fought Diaz and Huerta.

The Michigan State Suffrage Association has endorsed a state system of retirement salaries for teachers.
